(2001) non-gaussian ornstein-uhlenbeck based models and some of their uses in financial economics. generating random variates using transformations with ... - random point processes donald l snyder a comprehensive treatment of mathematical models for physical phenomena characterized by highly localized events in time, space, or a combination of both the poisson process of time is introduced systematically throughout to develop a hierarchy of useful point process models. the author deals with such processes as compound poisson processes. time ... point process, spatial-temporal 1. introduction. aspatial ... - point process) is a random collection of points, where each point represents the time and location of an event. examples of events include incidence of disease, sightings or births of a species, or the occurrences of fires, earthquakes, lightning strikes, tsunamis, or volcanic eruptions. typically the spatial locations are recorded in three spatial coordinates, e.g. longitude, latitude ... some wavelet analyses of point process data - some wavelet analyses of point process data david r. brillinger department of statistics university of california berkeley, ca. 94720-3860 brill@statrkeley statistical analysis of neural data - columbia university - while we will spend most of our time discussing one-dimensional temporal point processes, it is worth noting that the concept of a poisson process extends readily to the multidimensional case (snyder and miller, 1991; moeller and waagepetersen, 2004). simulating nonhomogeneous poisson point process based on ... - it is well known that one of the most important and famous point processes is nonhomogeneous poisson process. let us first study this process: 1.1. the nonhomogeneous poisson process from a modeling point of view the major weakness of the poisson process is its assumption that events are just as likely to occur in all intervals of equal size. a generalization, which relaxes this assumption ...
